MEDIA RELEASE

New CEO for PRM Property

Independent boutique property development and project management company PRM Property Group has appointed former Aspen Group senior executive Brendan Acott as its new Chief Executive Officer.

Mr Acott was the Head of Asset Management and Chief Executive Officer of Living during his 10 years at Aspen and has served on various committees with the Urban Development Institute of Australia. Mr Acott is also a non-executive Director of MNG.

PRM Property Group was established in 1998 by Executive Chairman Steve Robertson who has developed a strong track record in the delivery of quality master planned communities.

Mr Robertson has quietly gone about building his business over the past 17 years, winning several industry awards along the way for PRM's work.

“PRM was founded, and continues to grow on the principal of establishing quality partnering relationships, all of which are long standing and continue today

“With Brendan now leading our team as CEO, we are confident that PRM will continue to build on these partnerships, delivering great outcomes for our existing communities and partners.

“We're also seeking to grow our business through the acquisition of new projects and partnering opportunities.”

PRM is well recognised for its projects including Mevé at Beelias – a joint venture partnership with the Department of Housing that has been well recognised as a master planned development including an integrated village featuring a local shopping centre, community centre, child care and school facilities as well as boardwalks, walking trails, retained native vegetation and recreational facilities.

Banksia Grove, near Joondalup, also developed in partnership with the Department of Housing and Walker Corporation, is a master planned development, featuring a diverse range of lot sizes and densities, including the provision of retail and commercial premises, community and educational elements and extensive retained bushland throughout the estate.

Mr Acott said he was looking forward to the challenge in his new role and pleased to be able to bring his commercial, property and financial experience to PRM where he will be part of a dynamic team of professionals, responsible for delivering high quality land development and built form projects.
